Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The World of Books: A Guide to Reading for Young People in Which May Be Found Volumes of Many Kinds Both Grave and Gay 2. It is often useful to construct a brief outline of your report before you begin. 3. Special questions for each book read will in most instances be set by teachers at the time you are giving your report. The object of these questions will be to test how accurately and carefully you have read the book you are reporting on. 4. When a book report is given orally, the same plan should be pursued as is indicated under the first heading above. In an oral report, however, remember that in a way you are advising your fellow-students whether or not they should read the book about which you are telling them. Your report, in other words, is distinctly practical in such cases. 5. Some newspapers and magazines publish book reviews - reports, that is, on newly issued books. You will find it instructive to read some of these, in order to learn how trained critics write reports. Here is an example: Prof. W. S. Davis, the well-known writer of the classical novels, A Friend of Caesar and A Victor at Salamis, has prepared an elementary handbook on Greek Private Antiquities, under the title A Day in Old Athens (Allyn Bacon, $1.25). The book purports to set forth the experiences at Athens of a visitor in the year 360 B. C. The tourist lands at Piraeus, follows the outside road to Athens, visits the market-place, then the home of a well-to-do gentleman. In connection with this he gives all the necessary...
