An environmental index might range, for example, from 0 ( representing low risk of exposure ) to 100 ( representing a high exposure risk ). Or, instead of a health risk, one or more environmental conditions might be represented ( e. g. , dissolved oxygen levels as one indication of water quality ). The development of an index often also involves establishing weighting factors ( i. e. , giving the more important variables more weight than less important variables ) as well as an equation for combining all the relevant data values into the index scale. When you develop or use indexes, related...
