By Stephen Joseph Wolf

Idjc Press, United States, 2009. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 201 x 127 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Planning My Own Funeral? offers a four-week process for planning one's own funeral, ideally in a group of 5 to 15 people. Designed by a parish priest who considers funerals one of the best ways to evangelize families, this little book helps an adult Christian of any age to pray with courage about his or her eventual human death, and how to be more fully alive now. The book can, of course, be used by an individual. But experience suggests that it is much more fun in a group. The consensus of those in one suburban parish after the four weeks was We never laughed so much while sharing our faith! Planning My Own Funeral? can also help the faithful Christian to follow the spiritual advice of St. Benedict: Keep daily your death before you. It may not be appropriate for those under the age of 25, and those who struggle with conditions such as depression are especially advised to use the book in a group. Enjoy this little immersion in the paschal mystery of Jesus...
